it cannot be contended that the Cincip ti convention was a fair representation of the Democratic party of the country. There were at least one hundred postmasters in atten-dance, and nearly one thousand office-holders of various grades were present, either as delegates upon the floor or composing a very cou-siderable portion of the "outside pressure. These office-holders were not there to represent the people, but to save their own bacon They don't care what becomes of the peop are allowed to feed at the public crib. It w thus that the rights of the south were bartared away for the hope of Northern Freezoil suppor It was thus that a platform was adopted that is ntended to cheat both sections of the country. It was thus that James Buchanan, "one of the same sort," a lifa-long office-seeker, was selected as the candidate for the Presidency. But the office-holders and office-seekers, in their blind thirst for the public plunder, have ex-posed their hands; the people will see the fraud and will dissown it. They may be willing to make secretices for their country, they may consent to yield much for party success, but they will never agree to become parties to such a grand awandle for the mere purpose of gratifring the insatrable gluttony of the gre seekers who congregated at Cinclanati end nominated James Buchanan.

Upon the first ballot he received almost the warn-tmous vote of the Southern States and amajority of the votes of the Northern States. All the votes of the South except four were given to votes of the South except four were given to him, and enough of Northern votes to make more than two-thirds of the votes of all the States. His nomination gave complete satisfaction to all except the ultra abolitionists of the North. He was immediately recognized as the man for the times, the man upon whom the whole mation can rely to restore peace to a distracted country, to give permanence and perpetuity to our Union, and to defend our Republic from the aggressions of foreign foes and the machinations of domestic traitors. Although brought forward by the South as its chosen candidate, he was accepted by the conservatives of the North with joyful acclamation.
